A new high record of fines and costs assessed in a single day was set in the town court of Khimgly Monday, when Judge Harry E. Back fixed charges against violators of the liquor laws in excess of $1,000.

The day's session came as a sequel to the roundup made by the state police Saturday night. A crowded court room heard the evidence in the cases. One hundred dollars and costs on each count was the basis of settlement in all cases except those attended by extenuating circuinstances.

He also appealed to the superior court, the court fixing his bonds at $300, in default of which he was committed to the jail at Brooklyn to await trial. Officer Cleveland testified that he had bought the whiskey of Bruno. The latter denied this, claiming that he had never seen Cleveland in his life until he looked upon him in the court room. Bruno has been living at the boarding house kept by Mrs. Elizabeth Chase in the Johnson building opposite the Attawaugan hotel. This was one of the four places raided by the state police Saturday night, they securing there a market basket full of empty whiskey bottles and one half-pint bottle of whiskey. Bruno denied that he has done any illegal selling of liquor. He said he was in Putnam when the officers were making the raid.

Judge Back also had something to say to Boulias, mentioning among other things that if he were to fine him at all it would be with the same degree of severity as in the other cases. The court, however, made it clear that such cases as brought Connors and Boulias into court are not to be regarded as a class that will be lightly dealt with and that he did not want anyone to get the idea that in such instances they could come into court claiming that it was the first time they had done such a thing and be let off.
